DESCRIPTION TOUR:

The trail begins with a tough climb in one kilometer, but the ground is fine. Fold to the east and bike over marshes and through birch forests. The beautiful polar wool thrives here and there are also plenty of cloudberry at some places.

After 3.5 kilometers you hear the noise of Anderssjöån on your right and you can get off the bike to explore the rapids nearer. Soon you cross the river via the newly laid bridge that leads you over a small island that shares the creek. This is a perfect place for a coffee break so take this opportunity to refill the bottles, or take a refreshing dip. You now have less than 2 km away from the highest point, but the toughest part is done and now waiting stunning views towards Hamra mountain in the east.

After the 4.5 kilometers turn right on a gravel road that leads you to the south in a 500 meters long downhill. You will now arrive at a car park where you take the left and you are now on the Hamra mountain. The trail here will sharply turn to the right into winding paths that take you down to the main road again.

Now it's time to go down through the birch woods and it will go fast! Beware about the sign that says "Brant backe" which means steep hill and that you have to be careful. After about 6 km, follow signs to the left to turn aside for a smaller and more technical trail. Here you have a beautiful view towards the hills across the valley.

After 7 km you are down on the main road again and you can if you want to take the right and go back to the starting point at Strandgården. It is a further 3 km away.
